What is a Masternode ?

It's important to first explain what is a Masternode.

But before that explanation it's important to start to define what is a Node and afterwards what's Masternode stand for.

Nodes are nothing but computational devices in the network used to host, validate, maintain the ledger copies and secure the system.

Normal nodes can have a partial reproduction of the ledger.

A Masternode is a servers enabling a network.

They are used to validate transactions that ordinary servers can't handle.

They allow features like private transactions, direct send and governance which is exactly what they are rewarded for, so if nodes appear to be kids, we can consider Masternodes as Parents.

*When your pack is mature, in addition of the rewards received, your package valuation will be higher/Lower due to the pack valuation based on the Masternode spot market price.

So the rewards we are collecting are because our Masternode cluster have been selected to received the rewards. It's a win win situation because the more Masternode there are and the more the network is secure.
